

VOICE IN WHISPERS AS SHE ANSWERS

But Marsha Warrington Never Falters as She Tells Story.

ORDEAL NOT CONCLUDED

Continues Recital of How She Was Led Into Trip to Reno.

San Francisco, August 12.—Marsha Warrington continued to be the chief witness to-day in the trial of the government's case against Maury I. Diggins, former State architect of California, charged under the Mann act with having transported her from Sacramento to Reno for immoral purposes.

She picked up the unfinished story of her intimacy with the defendant, and carried it through to the end; lowering her eyes at times and dropping her voice almost to a whisper, but never faltering in her answers. When she left the stand, subject to further examination tomorrow, her story remained unchanged. Diggins, she said, had induced her to leave home against her wishes and judgment. It was he who had bought her transportation.

During the cross-examination, Diggins constantly prompted the questions of his attorneys, and steadily kept his eyes on the girl's veiled face, but she constantly avoided his gaze.

When the essentials of her previous testimony were called into doubt, she calmly answered a stronger re-examination.

The courtroom was somewhat startled in the afternoon session by the emphatic admissions of the judge to the fact that the case must not be decided by the jury, particularly with any friend of Diggins or Drew Caminetti, the latter a co-defendant in another case, on a similar indictment. The judge said that he must not even allow the case to be mentioned within their hearing or read about it in the newspapers.

These are the usual instructions to juries, but the emphasis was unusual. They were twice repeated by Judge Van Fleet this afternoon gave rise to inquiries which he would not satisfy. Theodore Roche, who thus far has conducted the government's case, merely said there was reason for the court's order.

The juror admitted he had been in company with the case was discussed, though he had not joined the talk.

Just before adjournment, Attorney Nathan Goshlin, for the defense, asked permission to place Roche on the stand. On the return trip from Reno, he said, while Diggins, Caminetti, Loda and Miss Warrington were under arrest, Miss Warrington was given to Assistant District Attorney Atkinson of Sacramento, a statement of the defendant, which was taken down by an official court reporter, and which, he said, he was informed, was entirely at variance with her testimony in court. The defense wished this statement to be put in evidence.

At the close of the afternoon session, the power to compel the prosecution to surrender the statement, but he was willing it should be introduced by agreement, and, if introduced, that it should be made the basis of cross-examination. Roche denied the talk.

The story Loda Norris told this morning, which was the subject of the forenoon session, when Miss Warrington testified that she and Diggins had been companions of Caminetti and Miss Norris on various trips to San Francisco, Stockton and San Jose, where they had registered under false names as married couples.

Two minor witnesses—the managing editor of a Sacramento newspaper, and the press editor of the Sacramento County—were called to the stand, but there had been any scandal connected with the names of the four on the point of exploding in the newspapers or that their arrests were impending. Warrington had testified that Diggins had told her such was the case, and this fact had been her prime motive for leaving home.

PUZZLED BY NEW PRIMARY LAW

Suggested That Secretary Open and Tabulate Returns Before State Committee Meets.

MEANS SEVERAL DAYS' WORK

Party Authorities No Nearer to Awarding Certificates Than on Day After Primary.

Can the chairman and secretary of the State Democratic Committee open and tabulate the returns of the recent State Democratic primary in the presence of representatives of the candidates, but without having a quorum of the State Committee present? Of course, the State Committee has not met to award the certificates of nomination to the winners, but under the new system by which each precinct is sending its returns direct to the State Committee, it will probably take several days to receive the returns, and it is doubted if a quorum of the State Committee could be held together so long. Also there will be no way of checking when all the returns have been received, and were the committee to be called and begin its work, it might be necessary to adjourn while messengers went after the returns from the various precincts. The question of how the returns are to be tabulated is a subject of much discussion at the Capital, many leaning to the plan followed by the State Board of Canvassers after each general election, when the returns are sent to the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and opened and tabulated before the board meets officially to issue the certificates of election.

New Law Puzzling.
With something like a wagon load of primary returns under seal in a vault at the State Capitol, Secretary J. N. Breneman, of the State Democratic Committee, admits that the new primary law has him puzzled. Mr. Breneman has been in correspondence with Acting State Chairman Edward Echols and has conferred with Assistant Attorney-General R. B. Davis as to the procedure, but said yesterday that no definite date had been set for a meeting of the committee, nor had it been determined how the returns are to be tabulated.

In former State primaries the rule has been for the local election officers in the various counties and cities to turn in a meeting of the County or City Democratic Committee, which body in turn canvassed the local returns and certified the total for the county or city to the State Democratic Committee. In the recent primary this procedure was followed in Richmond, and in a large number of counties. In the senatorial primary two years ago and in the gubernatorial primary four years ago this plan was strictly followed, and the State Committee had to consider only the reports of the counties and cities.

Reports From Separate Precincts.
The Byrd primary law, amended and doctored by the last General Assembly, has put the State Committee in a predicament. The law requires that the returns be sent direct to the State Committee, and that the committee be in session to receive them. But the law also requires that the returns be sent to the State Committee in a sealed envelope, and that the committee be in session to receive them.

Dr. Fraser Tells of Importance of Colored Evangelization.

Speke then of the 10,000,000 of Africans in America and of the duty of the members of the white race who are Christians to see that the spiritual needs of these Africans are met.

Dr. Fraser called attention next to the elemental fact to be considered in this connection, and said that the importance of this duty of the church to the colored race is emphasized because of these facts: first, divine grace came as true Christianity to the colored people as of white people, and that while this claim may not be made regarding slavery, and while the best people in both races recognize the fact that the social standard of the church is distinctly different, and should be kept so, that divine grace can do as much for one race as for the other, and to deny the privilege of Christianity to Southern Christians prompts the discharge of this duty to the colored race because the religion of Southern Christians is identified with aid for the negro, hence any hindrance to the success of this work must be removed if the church is to meet the success it should meet in other work; fourth, one-third of the population of the South is composed of colored people, and it cannot be otherwise than that their religious condition should have its effect upon the two-thirds of the population which is composed of white people; five, the discharge of the duty of Christians toward the salvation of the negro will be a contribution which gives to these Christians a better understanding of the gospel and its power.

It is probable that Dr. Fraser was heard at this time by not less than 1,200 people, the auditorium being crowded to the doors.

The association decided to raise $500 toward the Hatcher $100 memorial fund at Richmond College.

A resolution was passed appointing a committee to consider the question of dividing the association into two sections. This committee will report a year from now.

Among the visitors present today were Rev. J. L. Ross, of Bristol; Rev. J. W. Gammon, of Richmond; Rev. J. W. Vatta, of Richmond; Rev. J. W. Williams, of Florida; Dr. F. W. Bond, of Richmond, and Professor F. W. Duke, of Richmond.

In the women's meeting speeches were made by Miss Alice Taylor, Miss Vera Hutton, Miss Shumate, and Miss Thomas. The officers of the women's missionary union were re-elected for another year.

The association will close its work to-morrow.

committee to pass on the result, each candidate to have a representative at the tabulation, and an opportunity to present before the State committee any complaint as to the regularity of the returns. Otherwise it is felt that it must necessarily be some time before the returns can be officially tabulated.

Secretary Breneman received a letter yesterday from L. M. Robinette, chairman of the Lee County Democratic Committee, asking his committee of the section of the Byrd primary law in question. The official returns from Lee County, which gave Mr. Byrd a large majority, it is inferred, have not been sent to the State Board of Canvassers, as the chairman, vice as to the construction to be placed on Section 20, of the primary act, which provides for the counting, certifying and returning of the results by the local election judges. Friends of John Garland Pollard assert that his campaign contention that the primary laws are confusing and inadequate has been amply borne out by the fact that eight days after the primary the party authorities are no nearer than they were on the night of election toward a proper canvass of the returns and the issuance of certificates of nomination.
